

Churchill Downs Incorporated Statement on Kentucky Supreme Court Ruling Regarding the Exacta System Used in Historical Horse Racing Machines

September 24, 2020

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 24, 2020 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Churchill Downs Incorporated ("CDI") (Nasdaq: CHDN) released today the following statement regarding the Kentucky Supreme Court ruling on the Exacta system used in historical horse racing machines ("HRMs") in Kentucky. CDI does not use the Exacta system in any of its HRMs in any facility in Kentucky.

We will work within our legal rights and in coordination with Kentucky legislators to ensure the ongoing legal operation of our HRM facilities in Kentucky so that we can continue to provide critical funding for the equine industry and support the citizens in the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Although CDI does not use the Exacta system in question at any of our HRM facilities, we appreciate Kentucky Governor Andy Beshear's support of the industry in his statement regarding Historical Horse Racing today:

"Historical Horse Racing is an important part of Kentucky's economy that supports jobs and contributes over $21 million to the state budget," Beshear said. "We are working with various partners to find a path forward."

About Churchill Downs Incorporated
